

CBD For Digestion

October, 2022

With gut health being so important, it's paramount to try and maintain it. Many foods and diets seem to help with this, especially probiotic and cultured foods that serve as vessels to friendly and beneficial bacteria. Cannabinoids such as CBD may also play a key part in supporting gut health. The endocannabinoid system participates significantly in the normal physiology of gastrointestinal function. The ECS displays involvement in motility, gut-brain-mediated fat intake and hunger signaling, inflammation and gut permeability. CBD may reduce intestinal inflammation through the control of what is known as the neuro-immune axis. Enteric glial cells (EGC) mediate both acute and chronic inflammation in the gut. EGC are responsible for maintaining the integrity of the gut mucosa and play an important role in gut immunity. CBD has been shown to control inflammatory response helps balance the ECS, and a tremendous potential to positively impact a variety of digestive complaints.

Many people who have either lost their appetite or lost weight due to a health issue or because of medications, may find relief and improved appetite using CBD. For example, feeling out of balance in life can affect the digestive system but as CBD helps release tension it has an indirect impact on promoting healthy appetite. Whether Conversely, CBD may boost metabolism and reduce food intake. Preliminary research suggests that CBD may reduce food intake and boost metabolism, which could promote weight loss. For example, animal studies indicate that CBD affects weight by interacting with CB1 and CB2 receptors in lymphoid tissue and the brain. These receptors are thought to play important roles in metabolism and food intake. CBD may also convert white (or bad) fat into brown fat, which may improve the body's ability to burn calories. A 2016 study supports the claim about fat conversion. The scientists involved in that study found that CBD can influence how the body interacts with fat on many different levels. Not only did CBD help turn white fat cells into brown fat cells, but it also caused a more efficient breakdown of fats within the body. Brown fat burns off energy as heat, stimulating thermogenesis and thus helping the body burn more calories.
